MEITHEAL 16:00 - 18:30

The Irish word 'Meitheal' (pronounced Meh-hel) means 'a collective effort for the greater good of the community'. It describes the Irish tradition of people coming together to respond to local needs; groups of neighbours helping each-other in turn with building, farming, harvesting crops.

Our Meitheal provides open spaces for self-organised experiments, dialogue, panels or other creative and exploratory events, which are emergent of the conference field. These spaces offer an alternative to planned and peer-reviewed workshops. We hope the Meitheal provides an opportunity for organic dialogue and experimentation at the edges of the conference theme.
